Spending a weekend together during a hurricane can change your life.Von Detra FitchDanielle "Dani" Kapur works for John Coffee at Coffee Advertising in San Antonio, Texas. His son, Steven, is Danielle's fianc. The pair makes plans to spend the weekend on Sea Horse Island, a little island off the coast of North Carolina. But Dani arrives to find that Steven has stood her up - again. A chain of mistakes and coincidences (mostly due to Hurricane Felix) has Dani spending three days on the island in the company of Adrian Massimino. And since the island has no phones, no television, and no vehicles, except for electric golf carts and bikes, Dani has no way to let anyone know what is going on. During those three days, Dani and Adrian face death together and Dani leaves a changed person. Adrian Massimino is CEO of The Mass Corporation. He is tired of women seeing dollar signs instead of his true self. So when he is in Dani's company, he does not talk about work, money, or anything that could lead her to believe that he is anything more than a broke playboy. But once the hurricane has passed and Dani has left for home, Adrian finds her missing purse. It is a wonderful excuse to follow Dani (using the address on her driver's license) and spend a little more time with her. Thanks to a bit of good fortune, Dani has just broken her engagement with Steven. The previously engaged couple did not part as friends. A few months later, Dani has opened her own advertisement agency and is in direct competition with Coffee Advertising for a contract with Mass Corporation in Manhattan. Adrian is still keeping his occupation a secret from her, so he has his friend and business partner, Marty, sit in on her presentation in his place. The time to admit the truth to Dani never really presents itself and when Dani tells him she is pregnant, Adrian is glad he had kept silent, because he has reason to believe the baby is not his. * FOUR STARS! This story begins just as the hurricane is approaching the island and remains nonstop until almost the middle of the book. From there on the pace slows down a bit, but never comes to a halt. Fans of Jayne Ann Krentz's early work will especially enjoy this story. Krentz used to pair powerful alpha businessmen with independent women who work hard. Often I detected that same flavor, more toward the beginning of the story than the ending. The only thing that is really hard for me to believe (but not impossible) is that Adrian can just hop on a plane and travel across the country to return her purse, yet Dani still believes him to be broke. However, I admit that Dani's reaction is priceless how and when she finally learns of Adrian's occupation. All-in-all, Jernigan has written a terrific romance that readers will read more than once. (I sure will.) Well written, a good pace, and interesting characters add up to make this story a winner! * Reviewed by Detra Fitch of Huntress Reviews.

KurzbeschreibungIts the wrong time the wrong place . . . to fall in love. When Danielle Kapur, an advertising rep in San Antonio, decides to fly to Sea Horse Island, North Carolina. She figures two things might happen she will have one last fling with her ex-fianc who she hasnt seen in eighteen months or they will figure out their problems and live happily ever after. She wants someone who will commit not another playboy. What she doesnt expect is drinking too much and ending up in bed with a stranger. Adrian Massimino, CEO of Mass Enterprises, stands on the balcony of his beachfront home staring at the dark clouds massing on the horizon. This is typical of the way his life has been going lately: a beautiful new home, a white sandy beach, and its going to rain like hell all weekend. At least he doesnt have a nagging female wanting commitment from him which usually stems from his money. Hes had one cheating wife. From now on its no-strings attached. Hurricane Fran hits the North Carolina coast forcing Adrian and Dani to spend the weekend together. Their passionate natures are building muchlike the storm outside until neither can resist the intensity of their attraction. KurzbeschreibungIts the wrong time the wrong place . . . to fall in love.
