Beautiful love story, great writingVon ManfredI have read Ms Sofras' previous books and as always, she delivers a well-crafted, intelligent and humorous story with a clever plot and realistic characters. The protagonists, Greg and Emma, are two lovely, caring human beings who seem to be made for each other, but there are obstacles that make it hard for them to find a common ground for their blossoming relationship. Greg's ex-wife is a manipulating, false * who would do anything to destroy his chance to find happiness (although she has married again), even using the children to get her way. Sofras writes romances to sigh for, but this is a female villain to "hate for". Emma's past (mostly in the form of her ex-boyfriend) gets in her way, too, and what's even worse, she finds out that she is the teacher of Greg's children. She doesn't want them to suffer, but soon even her job is endangered. I loved how the author manages to entangle all that conflict - she makes the characters grow and encloses sweet moments of romance and passion. A great read for everyone who believes that love will prevail!

Kurzbeschreibung Love can find you in the strangest places - but it's never for sale! They meet - of all places - buying tomatoes in the supermarket and there's no denying the attraction is mutual. But Greg, a software developer, is still raw from his painful divorce and Emma, his children's teacher, is recovering from her own heartache. Then the reappearance of Emma's career-obsessed ex-boyfriend and Greg's spiteful ex-wife threatens to kill their new love before it has even begun. Is Emma's love strong enough to survive Greg's demanding past and the threats to both their careers? What will be the cost of falling in love in a world where everything comes with a high price tag?

Autor und weitere Mitwirkende Until two years ago, Lynette spent many years working as a teacher and running the English Department of a busy London secondary school. Prior to that she spent several years living and teaching in Greece. She gave up teaching to focus on her writing and to date has published three contemporary romances: The Apple Tree, Wishful Thinking and Shopping for Love. Her first romantic suspense, In Loving Hate is due for release in October 2012. Lynette lives with her family in an early Victorian cottage in a historic village on the Surrey/London borders. When she's not writing, she loves catching up with friends and films, reading, gardening and trying to understand the family's rather eccentric cat.
