KundenrezensionenHilfreichste Kundenrezensionen0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. Skinny Dipping ...Oh yes please ;)Von Micwith Matthew Silver any time ! Thats for sure...oh what a sweet...kind...and lovely guymhmmmm...Well, this book is a good story and even has it's depths and includes a kind of complex storyentwined with a love story of Sophie and Mattew. I liked a lot how the two main charactersfound their way together...their up's and down's but what I did not like...and thats the reasonI gave only 4 instead of 5 stars, is, that Sophie has a serious problem with her self esteem. I mean come onit is perfectly normal for a woman to think sometimes "oh heck I just can not be good enoughfor a stunning, gorgeous and sexy as hell man like Matthew", but "HEY" along the way shejust should get over this nonsens and should belive in the fact that a guy who shows nothing but good intentions,mixed with a teasing edge and funny humor, is absolutly possible to be her man.But it took a while for that and I just kind of felt like, oh come on not again, sometimes. And I just did not get how easily Sophiecould get over her fear of the water..but oh well...all a part of the whole story ;) It was really nice to read all the detailed steps she is making to learn how to swim...that was awesom, and of course Matthew was always there to support her...mhmmmmBut still it's a very nice stors and a good read.

Kurzbeschreibung Second Place Winner - Breaththrough Novel Award Everyone has a fear. Fear of spiders? Arachnophobia. Fear of small spaces? Claustrophobia. And of course, the fear of being tickled by feathers: pteronophobia. Sophie Smart fears drowning. No, her fear isnt some made up malarkey like exposedflabophobia (acute paranoia when wearing a swimsuit and baring pasty thighs and a round bottom). Sophie drowned as a child. She died for three minutes. Her childhood trauma is real. Yet Sophie, hot-shot advertising executive, isn't a child anymore. Now Sophie's most important client, handsome Matthew Silver, is insisting she learn how to swim. She can't blame him really - he's the owner of a chain of swimming centers, and Sophie's in charge of his new advertising campaign.The last thing Sophie wants to do is get in the water, in a clingy swimsuit, with a client shes trying to impress. She's not going to win him over flapping around like an idiot, is she? But with a broken heart from her last relationship, maybe getting into the pool is just what Sophie needs. Maybe she can trust Matthew with her fears. Maybe it's time for her to forget about her past and take the plunge?Kurzbeschreibung Second Place Winner - Breaththrough Novel Award Everyone has a fear. Fear of spiders? Arachnophobia. The move was only supposed to be temporary, where she could use her creative writing degree from Queensland University of Technology, Brisbane. Ten years later, shes still living in London deciphering rhyming cockney, an entertaining but nonessential requirement as a freelancer. Her serious writing jobs include various research and development grants. Shes contributed travel features for the Times of Malta. In 2014, Skinny Dipping, her self-published title won a second place award in the Breakthrough Competition. She lives with her husband James and secretly feeds the neighbours cat.
