Enjoyable readVon SunneShortstory...and I'm really picky about shorts because most of the time they leave me dissatisfied. But this one is great. First, it still covers a longer timeperiod, of course with gaps but these are irrelevant. Second it absolutely wins through both MCs, on one hand Sal, so beautiful innocent, alive and open. And on the other hand Grey, cautious with his broken heart, without illusions. How these two slip into a relationship is enjoyable to read, it has meaning, it's a bit bittersweet and still despite some very serious parts, an entertaining and light read. Absolutely into my reread folder, I love it.

Kurzbeschreibung Wildlife photographer Grey Morissette is living a half-life, quietly mourning his lover, Saya Khin, who disappeared twelve years earlier into the infamous Insein Prison in Rangoon. Grey takes a picture of Sal Sanchez falling into an Alaska river with a sockeye salmon in his arms. Sal is a law student, and his passion for the environment and love for the native tribes, his beautiful young face and eager hands, cannot be ignored. But there isn't room in Grey's heart for two lovers. How can he bear to let Saya Khin go, after loving him so long, and reach out for the love Sal is offering him?
